AMA (American Medical Association) Citation Style
Creighton University Libraries

The AMA bibliographic citation style is the standard used by JAMA, the Journal of the American Medical Association. You may refer to articles in JAMA for examples of the AMA style in use:

The AMA Manual of Style

Instructions and examples for citing your sources in AMA style are provided in Chapter 3 of the AMA Manual of Style, available online at no charge to Creighton students through a library subscription:

The Basics of AMA Style

- In the text of your paper, identify references with superscript Arabic numerals.
- List all authors and/or editors up to six. If more than six, list the first three followed by “et al.”
- Journal references should include the issue number in parentheses after the volume number.
